Override the Veto

Keep Camp McGregor, Camp Pharsalia, and the Fulton Correctional Facility open.

Inmates at Camp McGregor, Camp Pharsalia, and the Fulton Correctional Facility are getting that second chance. These state prisons offer work release and other programs that provide inmates with education, substance abuse treatment and job training, — skills they need to remain law-abiding and productive when they return to our communities.

But the governor's budget vetoes eliminate funding for these facilities.

Unless state lawmakers vote to override the vetoes, all three facilities — in Saratoga County, the Binghamton area and the Bronx — could be closed.

711 inmates would miss their second chance. And, hundreds of state workers who provide these vital correctional-services programs would lose their jobs.

Too often, inmates in New York state prisons don't get the skills they need to lead lawful and productive lives. That's one reason more than 40 percent of inmates return to prison within three years. Without programs and facilities to properly prepare inmates for release, it's just a matter of time before they're taking another mug shot, and are sent back to prison.

Tell your legislators to change this picture. Tell them to override the governor's vetoes and restore funding to Camp McGregor, Camp Pharsalia, and the Fulton Correctional Facility.

Help give inmates a second chance to turn their lives around. Help keep our communities safe.
